Meetings With Groehl.

Marshall made his affidavit on February 13 before Harold M. Long, United States Commissioner for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania. At the outset Marshall deposed that earlier on the same day he had made a statement to reporters for the Evening Ledger. He gave the dates of his meetings with Assistant District Attorney Frederick J

"Each time we met we talked about he evidence he (Mr. Groehl) wanted me to give in Becker's case. The first time I met Mr. Groehl was in his office in the Criminal Courts Building, at which time he told me that he wanted me to testify in Becker's case, and to say that I saw Becker at 124th street and Seventh avenue in New York, speak-ing to Jack Rose. He told me that he had plenty of evidence that the man to hom Becker was speaking was Jack ose, but he wanted as many witnesses he could get, and therefore he wanted to swear that Becker was speaking ack Rose at that time. I didn't know that the man speaking

Becker was Jack Rose except from hat Mr. Groehl told me and what I had read in the newspapers.

Thomas Maxwell, connected with the deposition of the description of the many office, with the detective took me upstairs to Mr. Whitman:

Marshall states that he received three payments from the District Attorney's office, checks for $25, $150 or $160 and $70, respectively. He then makes the assertion that Assistant District Attorney Groehl threatened him with prosecution for perjury unless he testified as ordered. The affidavit says.

"At the first interview I had with Groehl he told me he could keep me in the House of Detention Intil I testified but instead of doing that he would send a man with me to remain with me did the time, and he told me not to talk to anybody about the case because Becker had men out looking for me to get me first. The man who remained with me all the time I was in Philadelphia, Washington and Richmond was Thomas Quarles.

Not Positive.

"I can positively state now that at the mobilization could not be construed as a hostile demonstration against any nation, but could not be construed as a hostile demonstration against any nation, but would be a preparation for future developments in the worldwide war, just as Switzerland, Holland and Italy have mobilized their troops.

"The armies of Italy, Switzerland and Holland are ready for war at a moment's notice," says the editorial, "while a volunteer army that would be called out by the President would be composed of recruits in training for future service. This country would be only taking steps for the creation of an army of defence which should have been taken years ago. Further delay in preparing some measure of defence may be fatal to us.

Timid counsels never applicate the approval of the upon its rights and resist aggression. Marshall then described various trips made from Philadelphia to this city, and stated that he was taken again to see District Attorney Whitman at Mr. Whitman's home, just before the trial, and that he told Mr Whitman. "I am the man who said he saw Becker talking to a man at 124th street."

At this point Marshall repeats that the polly reason he testified that Rose was the person he saw with Becker was because Mr. Groehl had told him that Rose was the person and because he had read in the newspapers that such was the case. As regards the circumstances of the identification of Rose by Marshall he affidavit says:

"On my first visit to Mr. Groehl's office he told Thomas Maxwell to take me over and show me "Jack Rose," and as far as I know the first time I saw him was when I was withe Maxwell when he took when I was a trip to solve the problem of unemployed labor with which we are contending."
